

Early Career Scholars

Travel Grant Applications

Early Career Scholars, participants who have received a graduate research degree (e.g., PhD) within the past seven years (late 2013 or later) or who are in a graduate program leading to such a degree, may be eligible to apply for travel grants to join the pre-conference workshops and attend the conference. See below for additional information. If you have any questions, please contact Dr. Julie Bowker (juliebowker5@gmail.com).

Pre-conference Workshops for Early Career Scholars

The International Society for the Study of Behavioural Development is planning six Pre-Conference Workshops for early career scholars – participants, who received a graduate research degree (e.g., PhD) within the past seven years or who are in a graduate program leading to such a degree - to be held in Rhodes on July 20, 2020, the day before the main ISSBD 2020 sessions start. ISSBD anticipates providing travel support for a number of qualified early career scholars to attend one of these pre-conference workshops and the ISSBD 2020 conference. Applications from early career scholars from any country are welcome. Please note that travel grants will only be awarded to early career scholars who apply for and attend one of the pre-conference workshops AND who have at least one abstract accepted for the 2020 Biennial Meeting.

Procedure for Application

Interested Early Career Scholars should apply to register for the pre-conference and request travel funding support via this application form. In addition to the completed application form, the following are required: (1) An abstract of 250 words describing current research work; (2) A 2-page curriculum vitae; and (3) A reference letter from a senior scientist familiar with your research work (preferably an ISSBD member). Please note that your reference letter and journal publications may be verified. If possible, please submit the application form and the three required items as a single PDF. If this is not possible, please try to submit the application and the three required items as a single MS Word document. Ensure that the name of the document(s) you submit includes your surname as the first word of its filename. Submit your document(s), using the subject header “Application” to Dimitra Kostoglou at: issbdrohdes2020@gmail.com. Please note that applications for a travel grant will only be considered from individuals whose academic contribution to the ISSBD 2020 conference in Rhodes (poster, poster workshop or symposium) has already been accepted for presentation. Therefore, decisions about funding will be made after decisions about acceptances to the Biennial Meeting have been announced. Incomplete and late applications will not be accepted. Please also note that this application is due BEFORE the abstracts are due for the Biennial Meeting.

DEADLINE FOR APPLICATION

November 15th, 2019.

Decision time-frame: funding decisions will be made in as timely a way as possible, but after decisions about the Biennial Meeting have been made. All funding decisions will be communicated via e-mail around January 15th, 2020.
